Actor-model Milind Soman talks about all that went behind completing the Sydney Marathon

MILIND: I HAD GOOSEBUMPS HOLDING THE INDIAN FLAG

Milind Soman is nothing short of an inspiration for fitness enthusiasts who strive to emulate his discipline and dedication. The model-actor added another feather to his cap as he completed the 42km Sydney Marathon recently, running barefoot. What makes it extra special is that he crossed the finish line proudly waving the Indian flag on foreign land.

Invited as an ambassador for the Sydney Marathon, Soman tells us, "They had seen [videos of me] on social media running with the Indian flag and asked if I could run with the flag in Sydney as well. Even though I did not run the entire distance with the flag, I held it at the finish. It gave me goosebumps."

AN UPHILL TASK

The 57-year-old admits facing some difficulties, given the distance to be covered: "Everyone faces the challenge of time. Training or even maintaining preparedness to run the 42km distance of the full marathon is a big commitment and requires dedicated time. That is the biggest challenge. But, when you run the distance and cross the finish line, you know that it's more than worth it."

In terms of terrain, too, he was taken aback. "I had been told that it was a flat route, but I discovered that it was probably the hilliest marathon I had ever run. Each small hill is burnt into my memory, and I am using the word burnt because Sydney on that day was experiencing a heat wave. But, it was fun to run across the iconic Sydney Harbour Bridge and finish in front of the gorgeous Opera House," he shares.

'RELEARN HOW TO RUN' Soman is looking forward to participating in the New York marathon on November 5. Vouching for running as one of the best forms of physical activity, he says, "I believe everyone should run or relearn how to run correctly, whatever their age, so that they continue to feel the joy of youth, lifelong. Regular running has the potential to keep the body strong and the mind open, active, clear and calm. It is not necessary to run fast or run 40-50km at a time, but the ability to run happily and comfortably should never be lost."

"Have fun, do not be too hard on yourself and learn from your experience of preparation for the challenge every day," Soman wraps up, with a piece of advice for aspiring runners.

All you need to know about rheumatoid arthritis

Rheumatoid arthritis (RA) is a chronic autoimmune disease characterised by joint inflammation, pain, swelling and deformities. In this condition, the body's immune system mistakenly identifies a healthy joint tissue as a foreign invader and launches an attack on it, leading to damage. It represents a relatively prevalent form of arthritis, affecting approximately 1% of the global population. While the precise etiology of RA remains uncertain, some well-established risk factors are:

- Family history of RA serves as a compelling indicator of susceptibility.
 - Age is a significant factor, with the risk escalating as individuals age.
 - Smoking is a risk factor, not only in terms of potentially triggering RA but also in exacerbating its severity.
 - Excess body weight can compound the effects of RA as it places added strain on the affected joints.
- Timely identification and the formulation of personalised treatment strategies are pivotal for the effective management of this condition. To diagnose RA, rheumatologists typically delve into a patient's medical history, perform physical examinations and conduct blood tests to detect specific markers. Imaging procedures such as X-rays and MRI scans may also be employed in the diagnostic process.

Management strategies are multipronged and include:

- Medication: A cornerstone of RA treatment, disease-modifying antirheumatic drugs (DMARDs) can help control inflammation and slow down the progression of joint damage. Early intervention with these medications is crucial to achieve the best outcome.
- Pain management: Pain and inflammation are hallmarks of RA. Nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs) and analgesics can provide relief. But, they should be used under medical supervision due to potential side effects.
- Physical therapy: Physical therapy plays a vital role in RA management. It helps improve joint function, maintain mobility and prevent muscle weakness.

Customised exercise programmes can be designed to suit the patient's needs.

• Surgery: In advanced cases of RA, where joint damage is severe, surgical intervention may be necessary. Joint replacement surgeries, such as hip or knee replacements, can significantly improve the patient's quality of life.

• Lifestyle modifications: Lifestyle changes, including maintaining a healthy weight, practising joint protection techniques and modifying daily activities can reduce the strain on affected joints.

There is no guaranteed way to prevent rheumatoid arthritis, but there are some things one can do to reduce the risk of developing this disease, as listed below:

- Eat a balanced, healthy diet. Have plenty of fruits, vegetables, nuts and whole grains. Avoid a high-salt diet. Limit processed foods, sugary or sweetened drinks and unhealthy fats. More red meat intake can also increase the risk of rheumatoid arthritis.
- Aim for at least 30 minutes of moderate-intensity exercise such as walking, swimming or cycling, five

- Smoking is a major risk factor for RA, so it is advised to quit to reduce your risk of developing RA. Also, avoid smoking around children.
- Periodontal disease is a chronic inflammation of the gums. Some studies have found an association between chronic periodontitis and rheumatoid arthritis. Good oral hygiene and regular dental check-ups can help prevent periodontal disease.
- Keep your calcium and vitamin D levels in check.
- Major joint damage occurs within two years of the onset of the disease. You will have good results if diagnosis and treatment begin within six months of your first symptom.

Fauda actor Lior joins Israeli forces in fight against Hamas

Israeli artiste Lior Raz has stepped up to safeguard the people of his country amid the war situation in

Lior Raz in the video shared online of him in Sderot

Israel. The actor, who starred in the web show Fauda, joined the Brothers in Arms movement, rescuing families caught in the crossfire.

In a video shared online, Raz can be seen taking shelter amid rocket attacks by Hamas, a Palestinian militant group.

In a video shared from Sderot (a town in Israel) on Instagram, Raz — who has previously served in the Israel Defence Forces — can be seen hiding behind a wall amid a fresh barrage of rockets.

"Accompanied by Yohanan Plesner @yplester and Avi @issacharoff, I headed down south to join hundreds of brave 'brothers in arms' volunteers who worked tirelessly to assist the population in the south of Israel. We were sent to the bombed town of Sderot to extract two families," he captioned the video.
